DETROIT TIGERS

Joe Falls

The bases are loaded with golden memories in this lavishly illustrated look at your hometown team. From its earliest beginnings in the 1880's, the history-making games and stars, incredible anecdotes about those crazy incidents on and off the field, and complete records on the team—everything is included to make this the best season yet with the Tigers.

1. Play Ball. A nostalgic look to the days when the club was called the "Detroits", the "Wolverines" and sometimes even the "Creams."

2. Beginnings. Back to the rough and tumble days when the bases were little more than sawdust-filled gunnysacks and the clubhouses little more than run-down shanties.

3. Milestones. Like how Frank Navin picked up the Georgia Peach—Ty Cobb—for just $500!

4. The Great Years. Such as 1909 when Detroit literally ran away with the pennant—winning by a gigantic 3½ games over the Philadelphia A's. And there's a lot more! 1907, 1908, 1934, 1935, 1940, 1945, 1968, 1972.

5. The Great Games. Such as June 22, 1950, for example, when the Tigers and the Yankees smashed 11 home runs in one game and nobody could believe it—not even the grizzled old Casey Stengel.

6. The Managers. Unforgettable characters like Black Mike Cochrane who led the Tigers to their first World Series in 1935.

7. The Stars. Take Dennis Dale McLain. He pitched and talked like no player in the history of the game. And Ty Cobb, Harry Heilmann, Charlie Gehringer, Hank Greenburg, Hal Newhouser—and other Detroit greats.

8. Off the wall. All the humor, anecdotes, and the games behind the game.

9. The Linescore. Completing the picture are the statistics, the all-time Tigers roster, and the year-by-year standings.

With over 200 photographs and drawings—eight pages in color.

THE FARM SYSTEM

The Tigers present the same solid front in the minors this season with two changes in managers. Les Moss, former major league catcher, is new at Montgomery while Jim Leyland returns from there to Clinton.

With a combined 299-296 won-lost record in 1974 which helped the American League dominate the minor leagues, the Tiger farm clubs eye even more success in 1975 as Hoot Evers, director of player development, continues to solidify the farm system.

TIGER SCOUTING

The Tigers are a member of the Major League Scouting Bureau, a sophisticated, computer-operated organization with 66 scouts across the country supplying essential information on prospects.

In addition, the Tigers have six full-time scouts of their own to evaluate the bureau reports: Wayne Blackburn, Portsmouth, Ohio; Jim Miller, San Jose, Calif.; Bob Prentice, Scarborough, Ont.; Frank Skaff, Timonium, Md.; Jack Tighe, Spring Lake, Mich.; and Dick Wiencek, Claremont, Calif. — all under direction of Bill Lajoie, director of player procurement, and Ed Katalinas, coordinator of scouting.

In the Michigan-Ohio-Ontario area, the Tigers also get assistance with clinics and tryouts from Reno Bertoia, Windsor; Jim Command and Bob Sullivan, Grand Rapids; Rudy Furchak, Fraser; Herm Kander, Toledo; John Skurski, Detroit; and Warren Stephens, Pontiac.

ERNIE HARWELL

George Kell and Ernie Harwell again head the Tigers' broadcast teams, doing selected games on television and all games on radio.

Station WWJ-TV (channel 4) is the new key station of the TV network, although a pioneer in Tiger television back in 1947. On radio, the network is fed by Station WJR (760), primary outlet since 1965.

Kell, former American League star and one of the game's top broadcasters since first hitting the air for the Tigers in 1959, is scheduled to describe every inning of the 1975 TV games with commentary from Larry Osterman on road games and Don Kremer on home games. Osterman, sports director of Station WKZO-TV, Kalamazoo, has been Kell's partner since 1967. Kremer, at WWJ-TV since 1960, is new in the Tiger booth this season.

Harwell's air career goes back to 1940 and he has been broadcasting Tiger games since 1960. Carey, at WJR since 1958, has been in the booth with Harwell since 1973.

... SERVING SO MANY
WITH SO MUCH

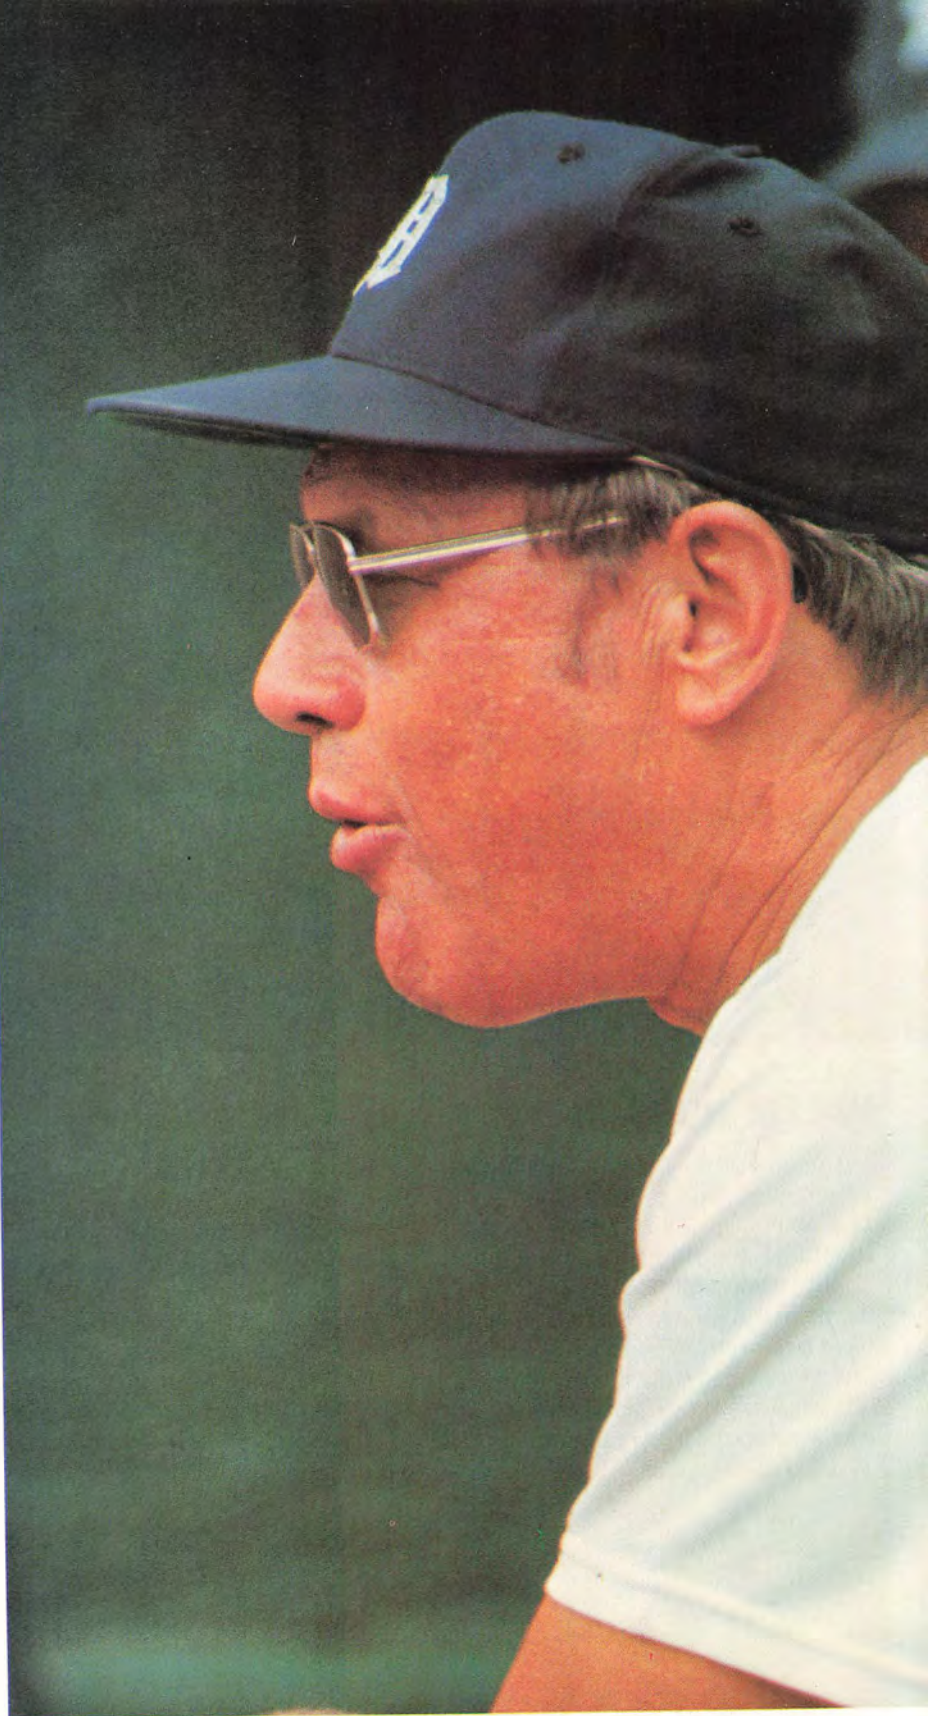

Manager Ralph Houk and his Tiger coaching staff for the 1975 season, a blend of experience and enthusiasm . . . Standing (from the left): Joe Schultz, Houk and Dick Tracewski. Kneeling: Steve Hamilton and Jim Hegan.

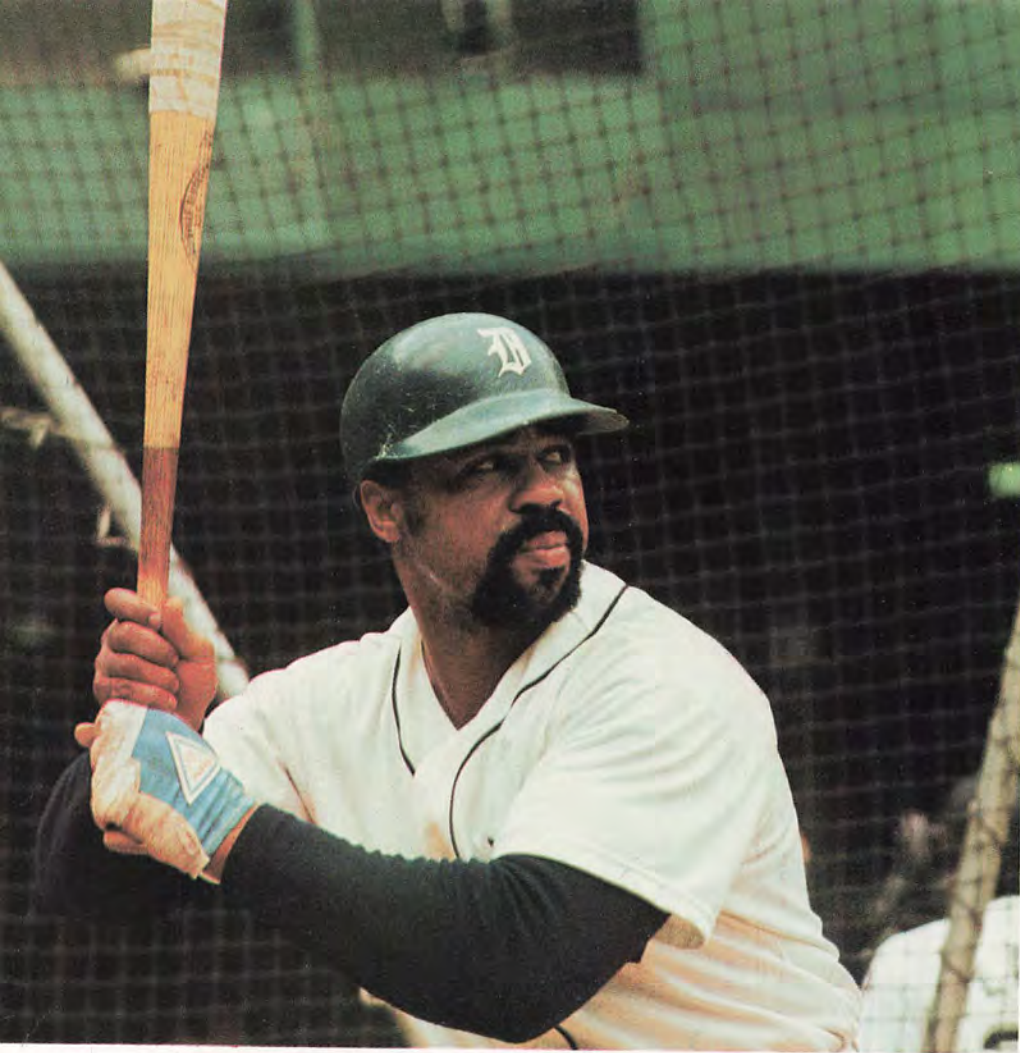

RALPH HOUK

In Ralph Houk, the Tigers have a manager with a number of outstanding assets. Experience is one; he is the dean of American League managers with 12 seasons under his belt. Success is another; he has had three pennant winners and two World Champions; he twice was named Manager of the Year; and he entered 1975 with a managerial record of 1,016 victories, 896 losses to rank high among 10-year veterans. Optimistic patience is another Houk hallmark, something probably never more vital to a team than in the current transitional period for the Tigers.

Three of the coaches have returned from Houk's baptism with the Tigers last season — Joe Schultz at third base; Dick Tracewski at first; and Jim Hegan in the bullpen. New as pitching coach is Steve Hamilton, veteran southpaw of 12 major league seasons making his debut as a coach.

The Tigers also had valuable spring training tutoring from Jim Turner, former New York Yankee pitching coach; and Al Kaline, retiring this year after a brilliant 22-year career as a Tiger star.

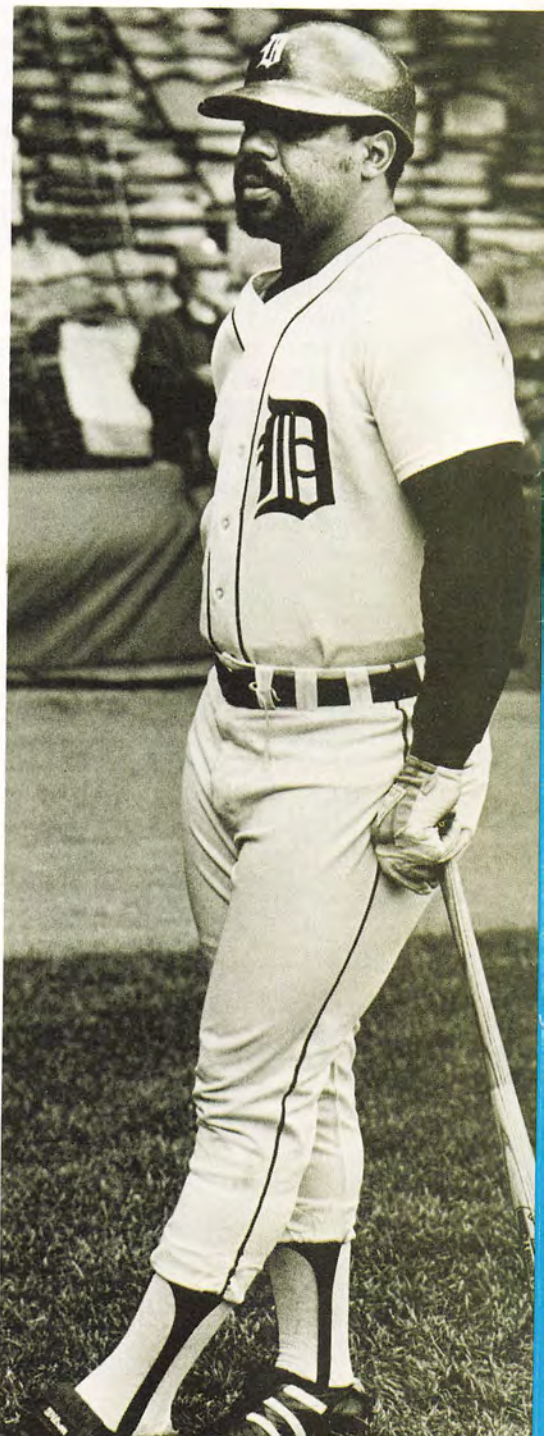

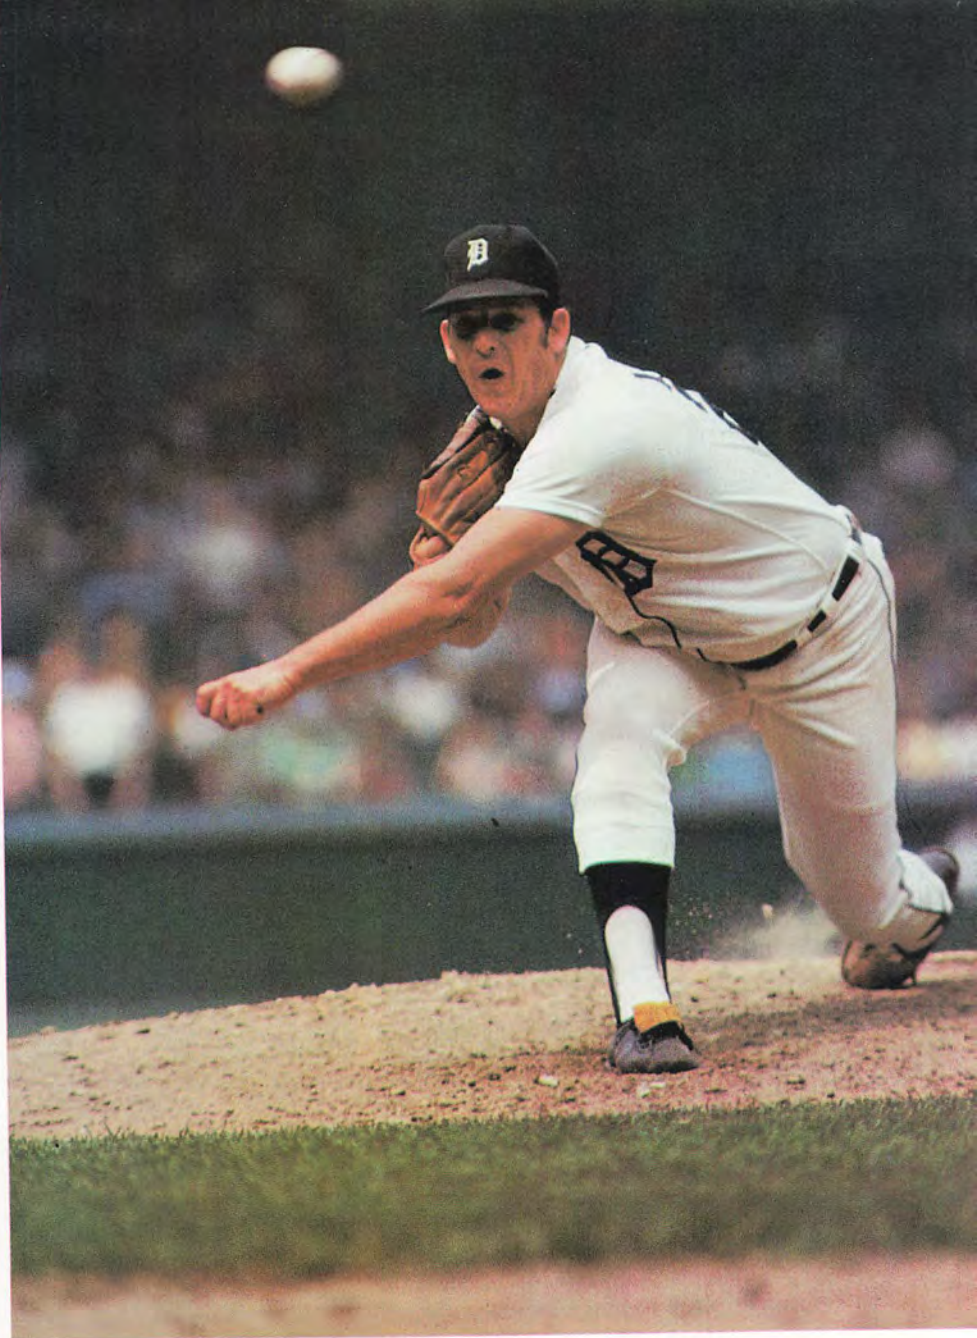

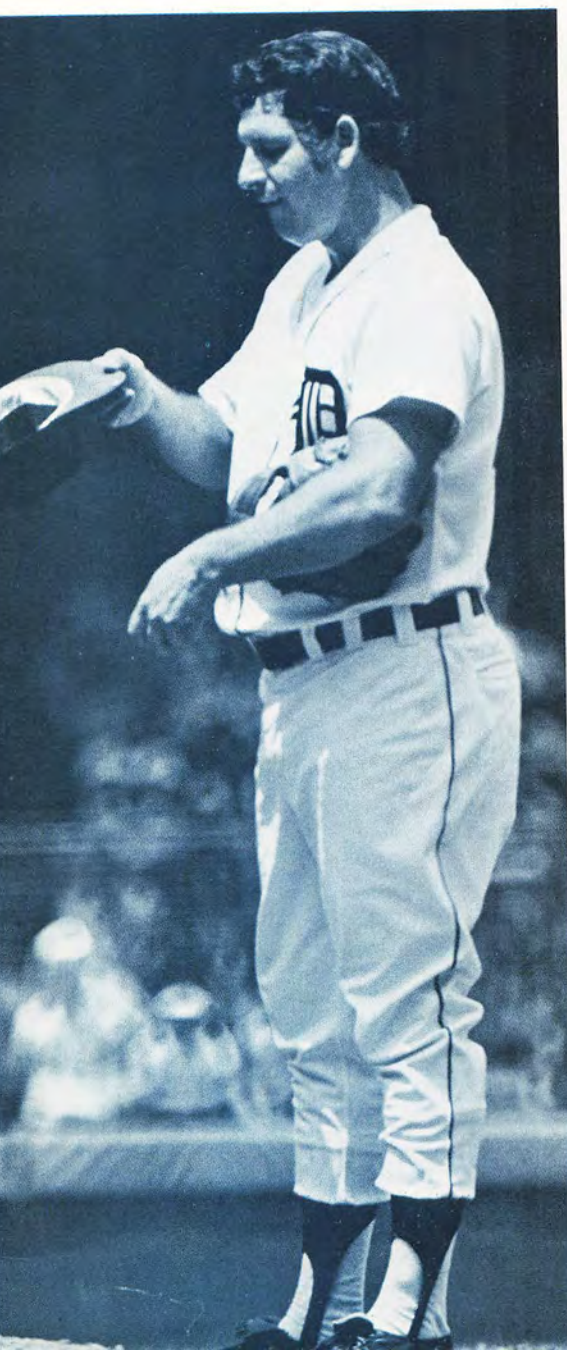

WILLIE HORTON

The time he will be able to play a complete season without injury is the time Willie Horton is looking forward to and the big slugger is hopeful about 1975. Leg injuries, ranging from his hamstring muscles to his ankles, have been Horton's big handicap — one he has had to play over — and last year was no exception. Horton was leading the Tigers in batting, home runs and runs batted in when he had to go on the disabled list in July, then have surgery in August to correct a knee injury received in a collision with the grandstand wall on a fielding play. Despite his long string of physical handicaps, Horton entered the 1975 campaign standing fifth in home runs and 10th in RBI among the Tigers' all-time leading hitters.

MICKEY LOLICH

One record seems to follow another for Mickey Lolich whenever the masterful southpaw goes to the mound for the Tigers these days. Before he hangs up his glove, there's no telling how many Tiger club records he will hold. One mark fell before his durability last season when Mickey's 41 starts gave him a career total of 427, to erase George Mullins' 395 back in the 1902-13 era. Lolich also added to his margins in two other club leaderships — fanning 202 for 2,540 in his career and posting three more shutouts for a total of 38. The man with the tireless arm has a chance during the current season to reach the highest total of innings pitched in Tiger history and it is possible for him to reach the highest totals in Tiger victories and Tiger pitching appearances before calling it quits on the mound.

BILL FREEHAN

No catcher in major league history can match Bill Freehan's career fielding average of .9938. None in American League history can match his totals of 9,676 chances accepted and 9,047 putouts. Those are gilt-edged credentials and help explain how the Tigers' rugged backstop has been an All-Star catcher 10 times, seven times as a starter. An injury to his hand was a handicap last season and Freehan spent 65 games at first base. But he closed fast after returning to catching duties; batting .297 for the season, a mark topped by only nine in the league.

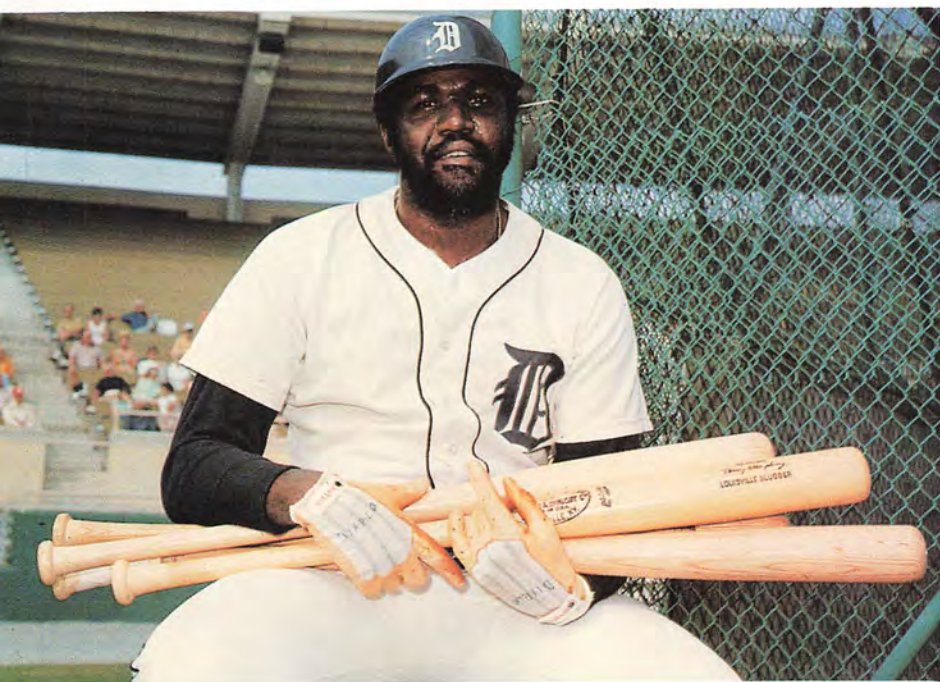

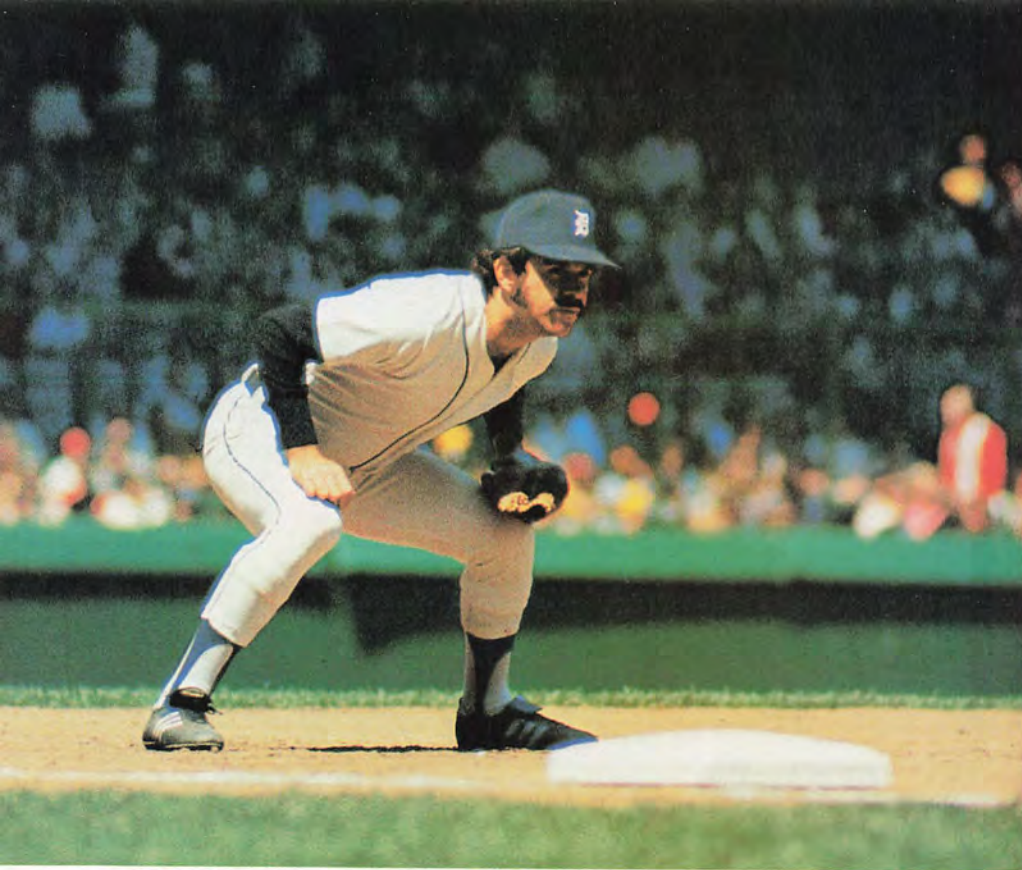

NATE COLBERT

Players like Nate Colbert don't often come along. He's a big fellow who hits home runs, yet fast enough to steal bases and agile enough to rank high among the best fielding first basemen. For those reasons, the Tigers considered themselves fortunate to land the husky slugger in an off-season trade with the San Diego Padres.

Colbert twice has hit 38 home runs in a season and posted an RBI peak of 111 in 1972. His home run total of 149 between 1969 and 1973 was the highest of all for active players entering the following season.

Originally signed by the Cardinals, then drafted by both the Astros and Padres, Colbert represented San Diego three times in All-Star games.

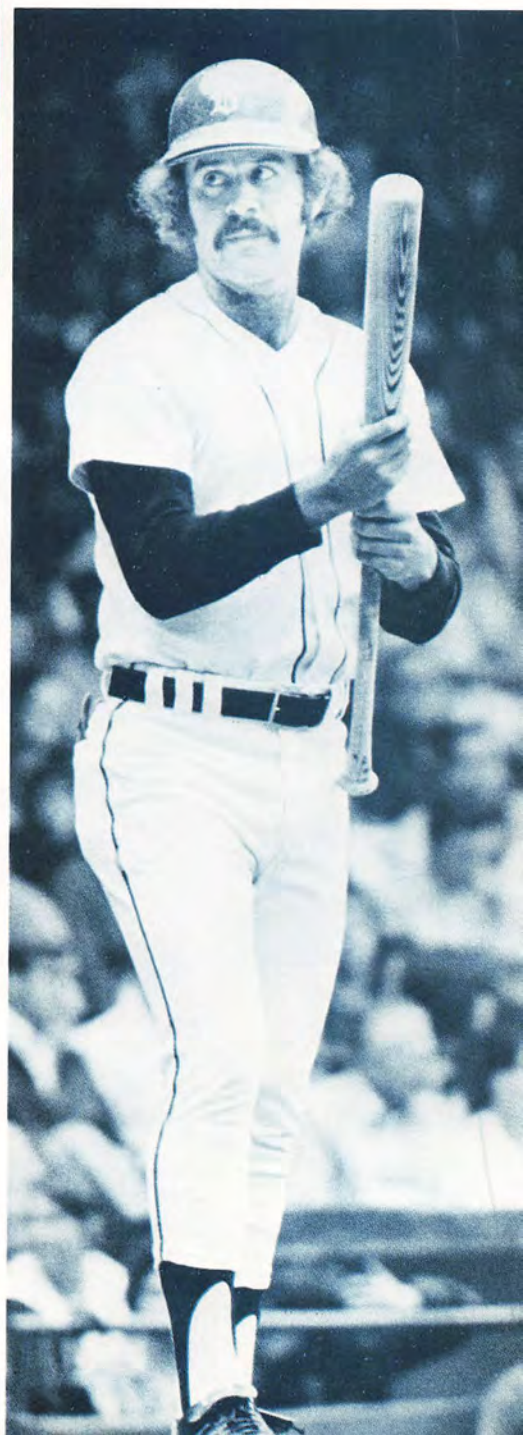

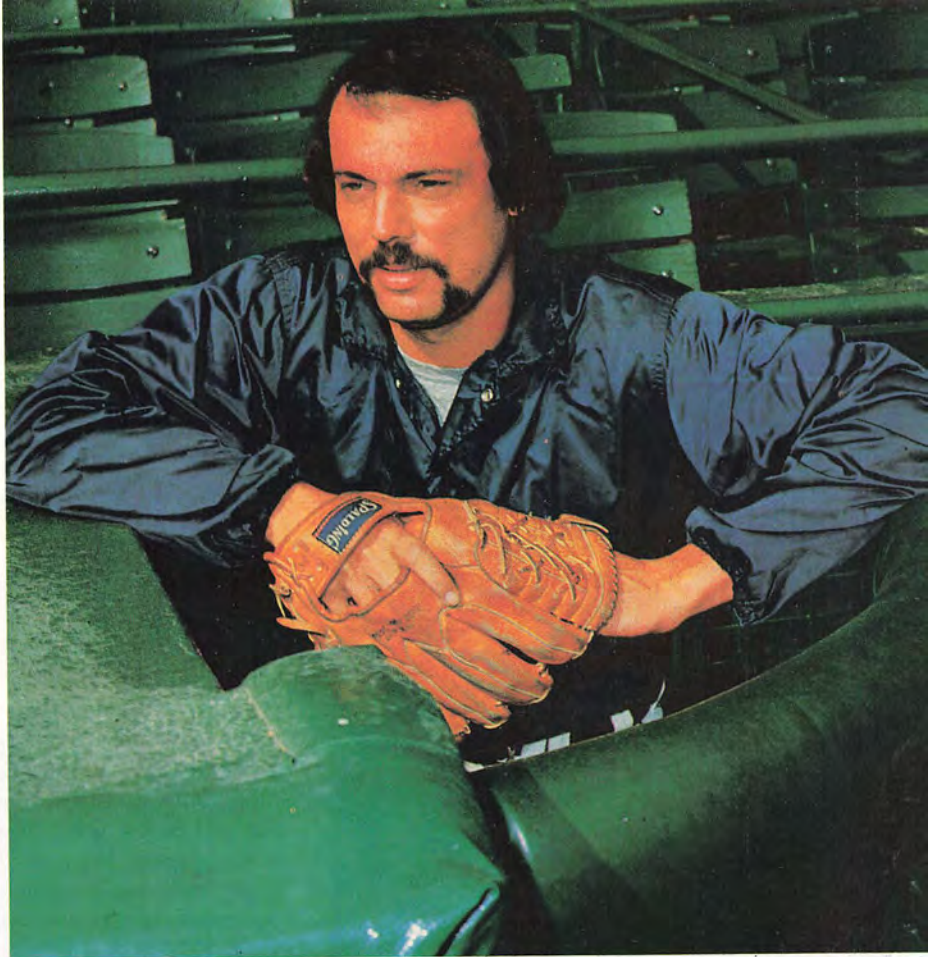

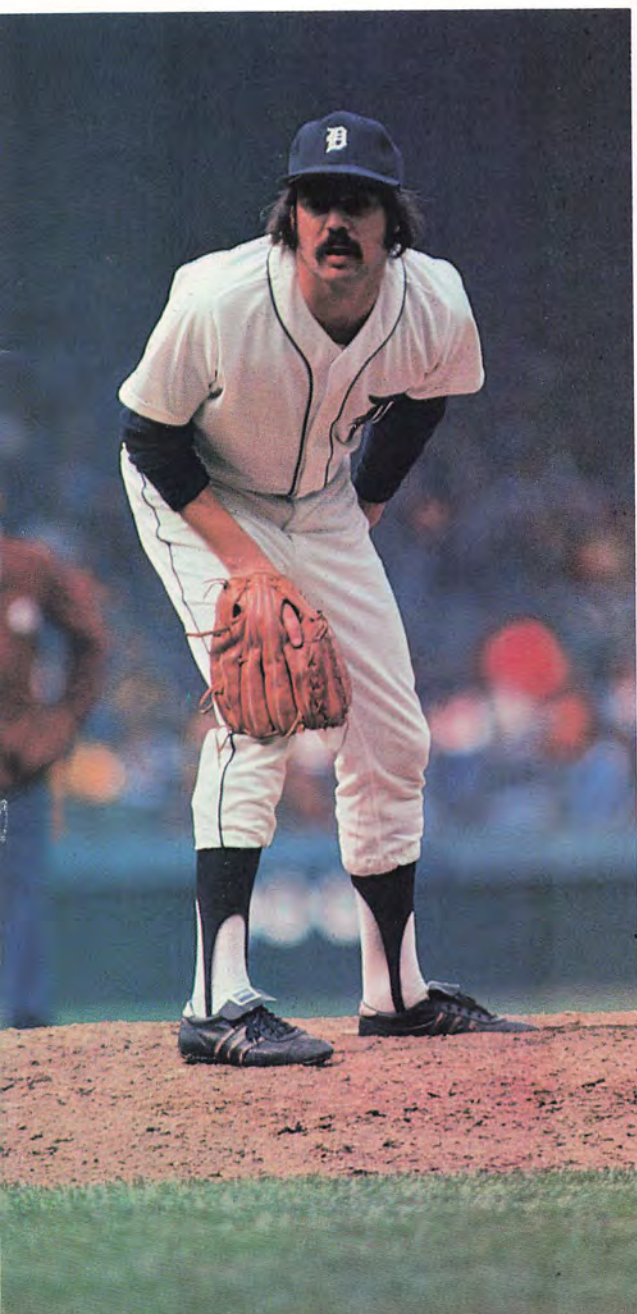

AURELIO RODRIGUEZ

Smooth and durable are the words for Aurelio Rodriguez, the smiling senior at third base for the Tigers. He has been a fixture there ever since his arrival in 1971 — hardly ever missing a game and making all the plays with his gifted glove in a manner to merit comparison with the best at his position. With the Angels and Senators before reaching Tiger Stadium, Aurelio enjoyed his best season at the plate in his first year as a Tiger, batting .253 and leading the club in hits and doubles. His batting hasn't been quite as robust since then, but he has led the club in RBI, doubles and games played at one time or another while giving the Tigers some of the most graceful fielding they ever had.

JOHN HILLER

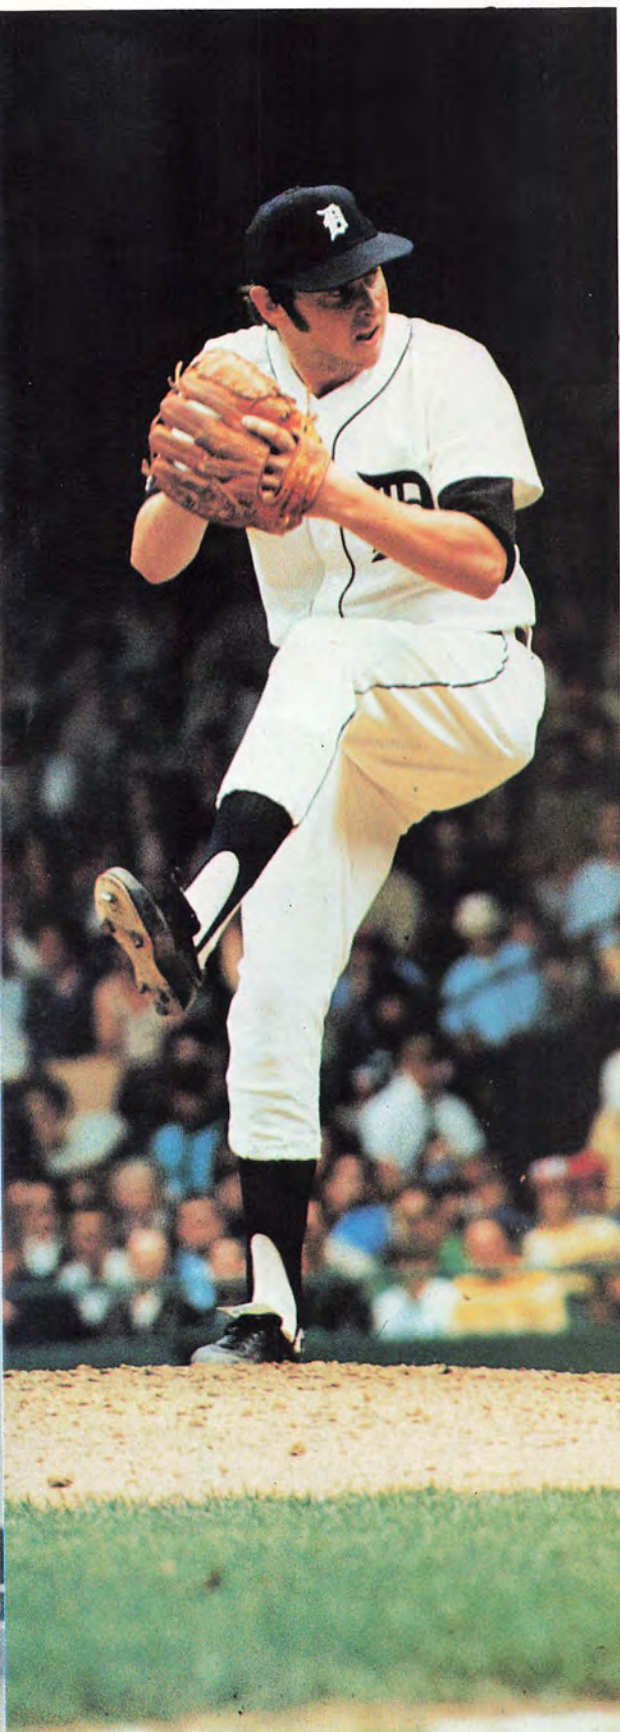

The stuff of which dreams are made! That's the story of John Hiller, the Tiger southpaw who fought back from a heart attack to become one of the best relief pitchers in baseball history. Floored by his heart attack in January, 1971, Hiller missed all of that season and half of the next before starting his comeback which led him to the top. In 1973, he set major league records with 38 saves and 48 Fireman's Trophy points (relief victories plus saves). Then in 1974, he pushed on to an American League record for victories in relief with 17 while adding 13 more saves under a much more stringent scoring rule on saves. That's a two-year record of 27 victories and 51 saves, a relief mark topped in 1973-74 by just one performer in the major leagues — Mike Marshall, with 29 victories, 52 saves for the Expos and Dodgers.

MICKEY STANLEY

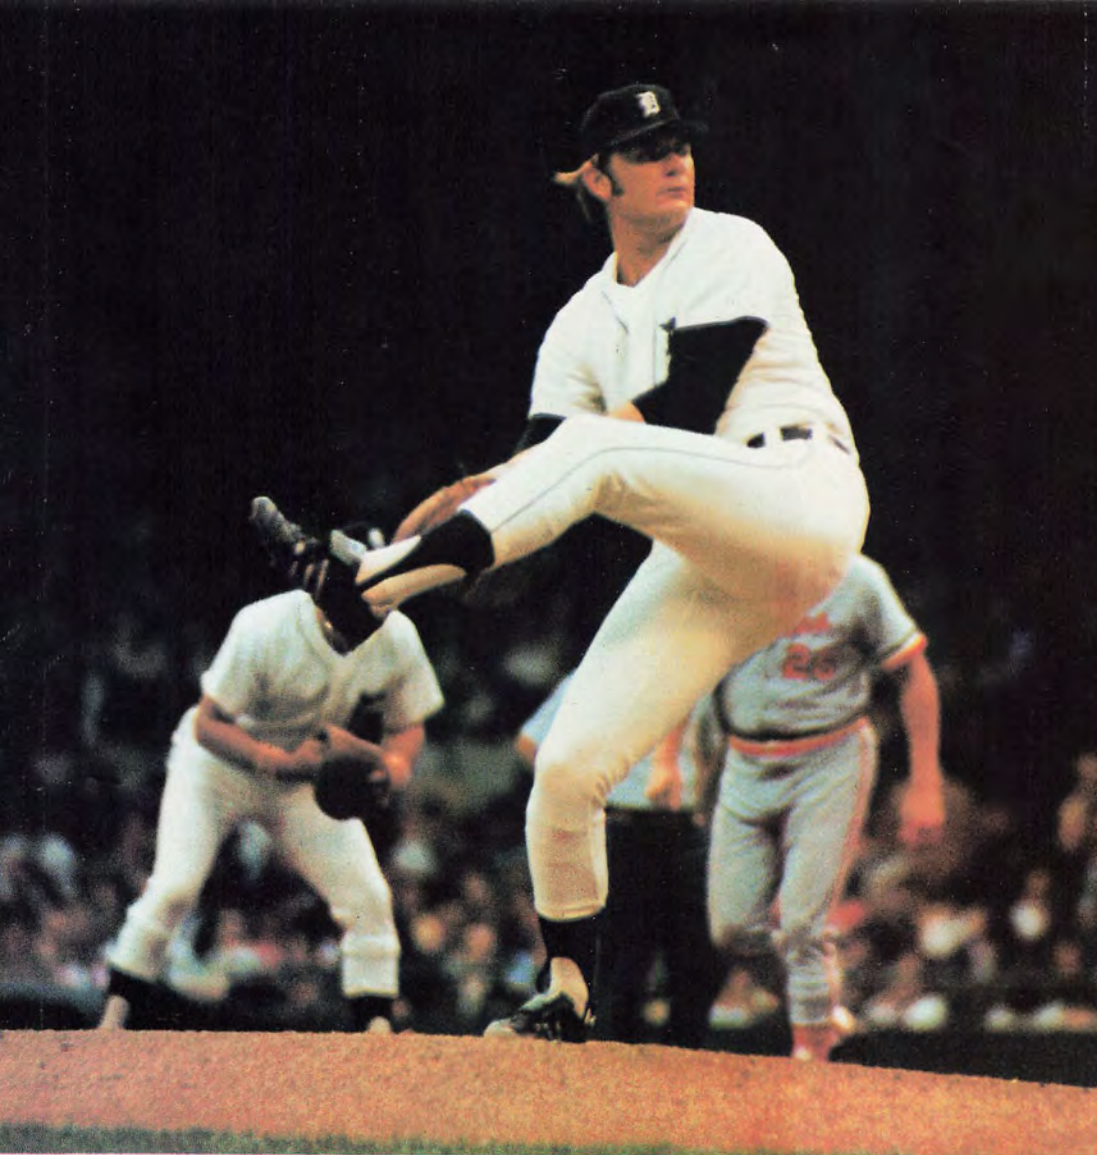

You might say that Mickey Stanley went out of action last season in a blaze of glory, although that's not exactly the way the perennially youthful Tiger outfielder viewed it. One night, he was helping the Tigers make history as they hit four home runs in the first inning of a game at Cleveland, a major league first. The following night, July 30, Stanley was hit on the hand by a pitched ball at Boston and a broken bone grounded him for all but one game the rest of the season. As a result, the four-time Gold Glove winner and all-around versatile performer fell below a 100-game season for the first time since 1966. Trade talk swirled about his head through the off-season but the Tiger high command made it plain that there was a place in the club's plans for the enthusiastic Stanley. While primarily a blue-ribbon centerfielder, Mickey has played first base, a little at other positions and all seven games of the 1968 World Series at shortstop, a feat Tiger fans won't forget.

JOE COLEMAN

The Tigers are counting on Joe Coleman to recover his earlier efficiency and help restore the club's pitching to its former high estate. After averaging more than 20 victories a year in his first three seasons as a Tiger, the youthful-appearing righthander slipped to 14-12 during the 1974 campaign, largely because of his wildness. On the way to his lowest victory total as a Tiger, Coleman picked up the dubious distinction of setting a club record for walks, issuing 158 passes in his 286 innings on the mound during 41 starts. However, he also pitched two shutouts, two two-hitters and three three-hitters. This son of a former Tiger pitcher of the same name came to the Tigers from the Senators, who made him their No. 1 selection in the very first free agent draft. With considerable experience for a 28-year-old, Coleman has a great variety of pitches which the Tigers are sure will restore him to the 20-victory class without delay.

LERRIN LaGROW

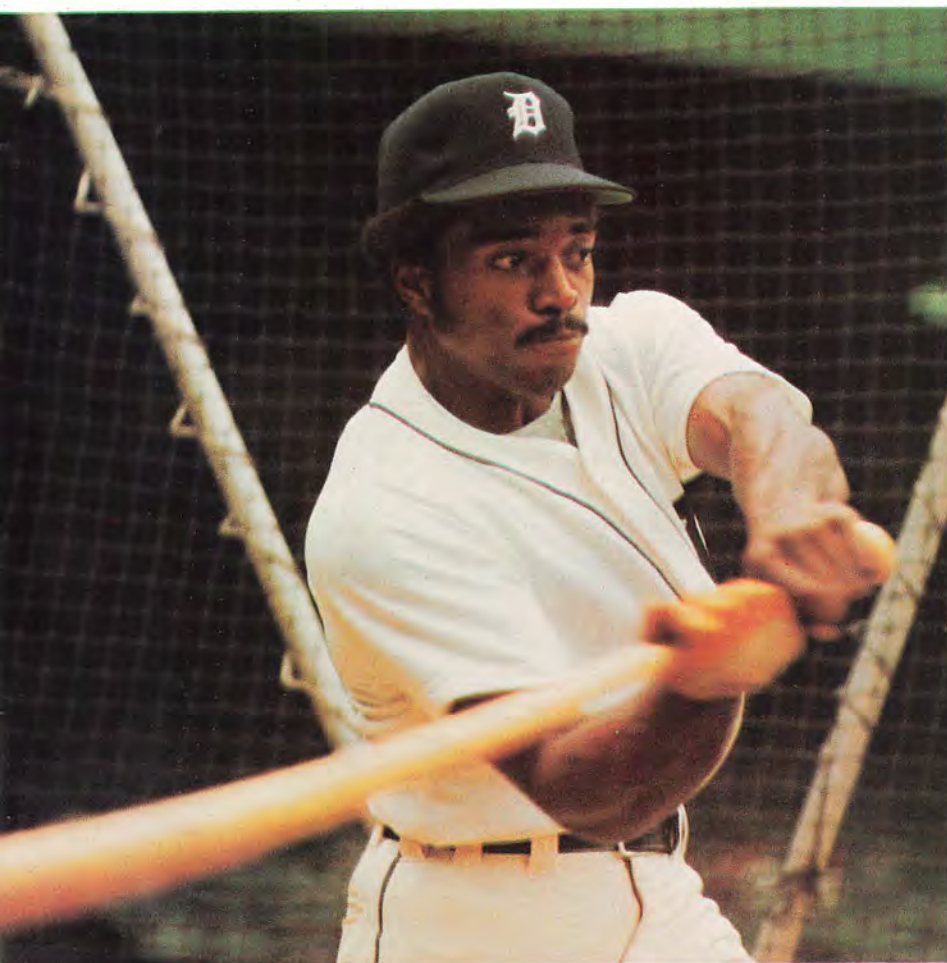

Promoted to regular starting status last year after fewer than 50 games in the major leagues, Lerrin LaGrow hit some rough spots but the Tigers are projecting success built on seasoning for the big righthander from Arizona. LaGrow pitched more than 200 innings last year for the first time in his career and that is seen as a big factor in the future predicted for him. LaGrow had a good start in 1974, but won only one game out of 11 decisions following the All-Star Game, with several of the losses decided by one bad inning. Signed off the campus of Arizona State, where he had a two-year 19-1 collegiate record, LaGrow will be remembered as the Tiger on the mound at the time of Bert Campaneris' bat-throwing incident during the 1972 division championship series with the Oakland A's.

RON LeFLORE

A great deal of the Tigers' future depends on Ron LeFlore, a young man with very little baseball background but a tremendous amount of speed, considerable other ability and all of the poise and confidence necessary for success. Signed in July, 1973 after release from prison following a youthful indiscretion, LeFlore became the Tigers' regular centerfielder within a year although having played only 134 minor league games. He started 1974 at Lakeland and was there long enough to win the Florida State League batting title at .339. Promoted to Evansville, he was there only nine games before getting the call to Tiger Stadium, where he stole his way into the hearts of the fans and became Tiger Rookie of the Year by vote of the Detroit Sports Broadcasters. His 1974 base-stealing was sensational: 42 on 46 attempts at Lakeland; 3-for-4 at Evansville; 23 out of 32 at Detroit; and then 20-for-23 in post-season play in the Florida Instructional League. That's star-making stuff!

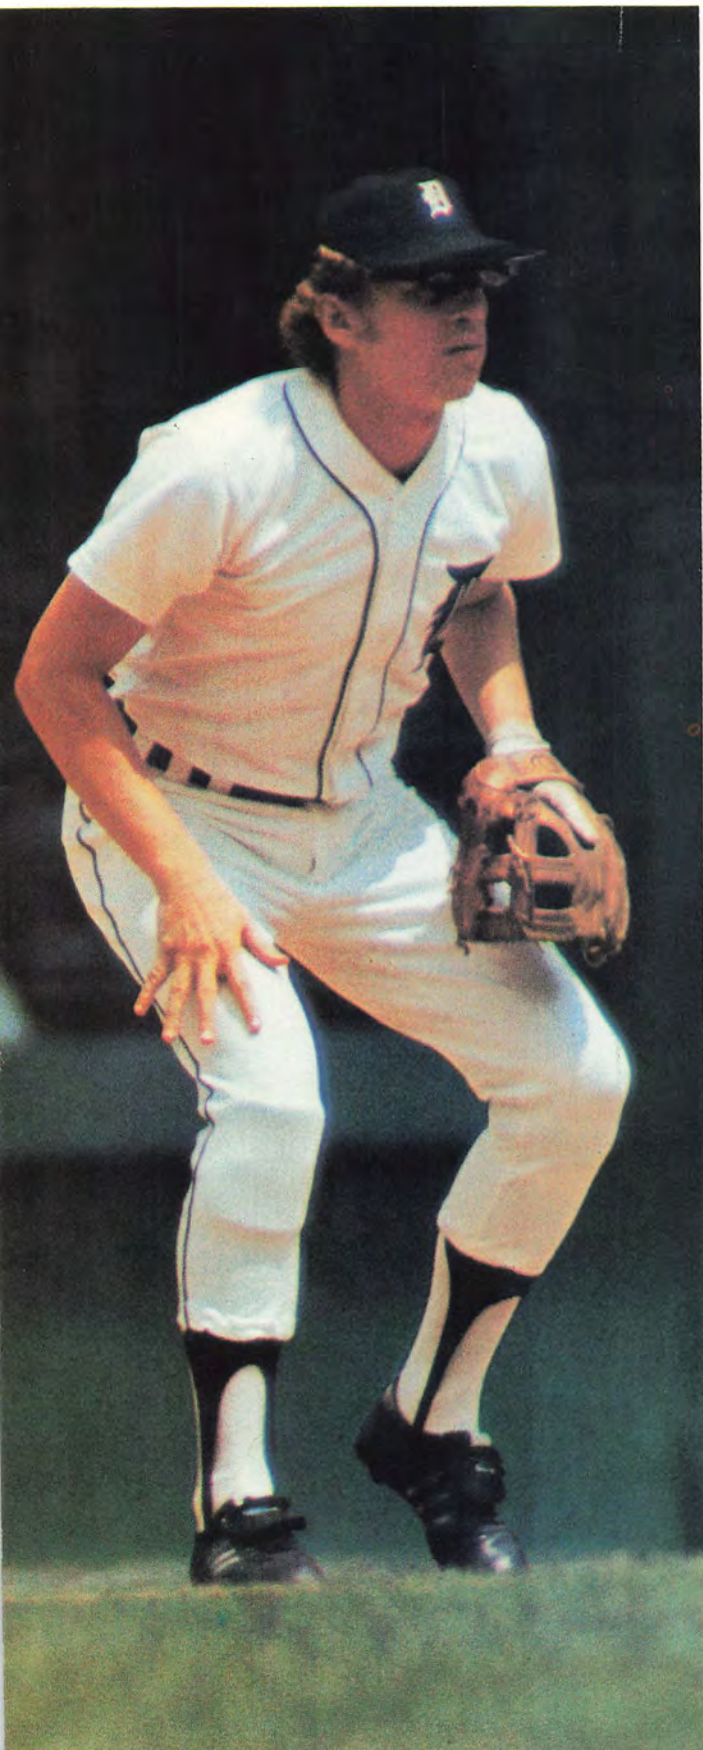

GATES BROWN

Lofty goals are ahead for Gates Brown, but no one is wagering that the rotund Tiger slugger will not reach them. Already the American League career champion in pinch hits and pinch hit home runs, Gates has his eye on the major league marks in both categories. Reaching them would certainly make him the Pinch Hitting King of all time. Entering 1975, Brown had 101 pinch hits, the most in American League history. He also had 15 pinch hit home runs, another league record. To become the all-time major league pinch hit champion, he needed another 44 emergency blows to top Smokey Burgess' 144. That's about three years of work for Brown, who had 16 pinch hits last season and a peak of 18 in 1968. As for home runs, Gates could easily overtake in 1975 the only two major league sluggers still ahead of him — Burgess with 16 and Jerry Lynch with 18. Brown started wearing the American League pinch hitters' crown back in 1971 when he overtook Fat Bob Fothergill, a former Tiger who also played at Chicago and Boston between 1922 and 1933 to accumulate 76 pinch hits.

GARY SUTHERLAND

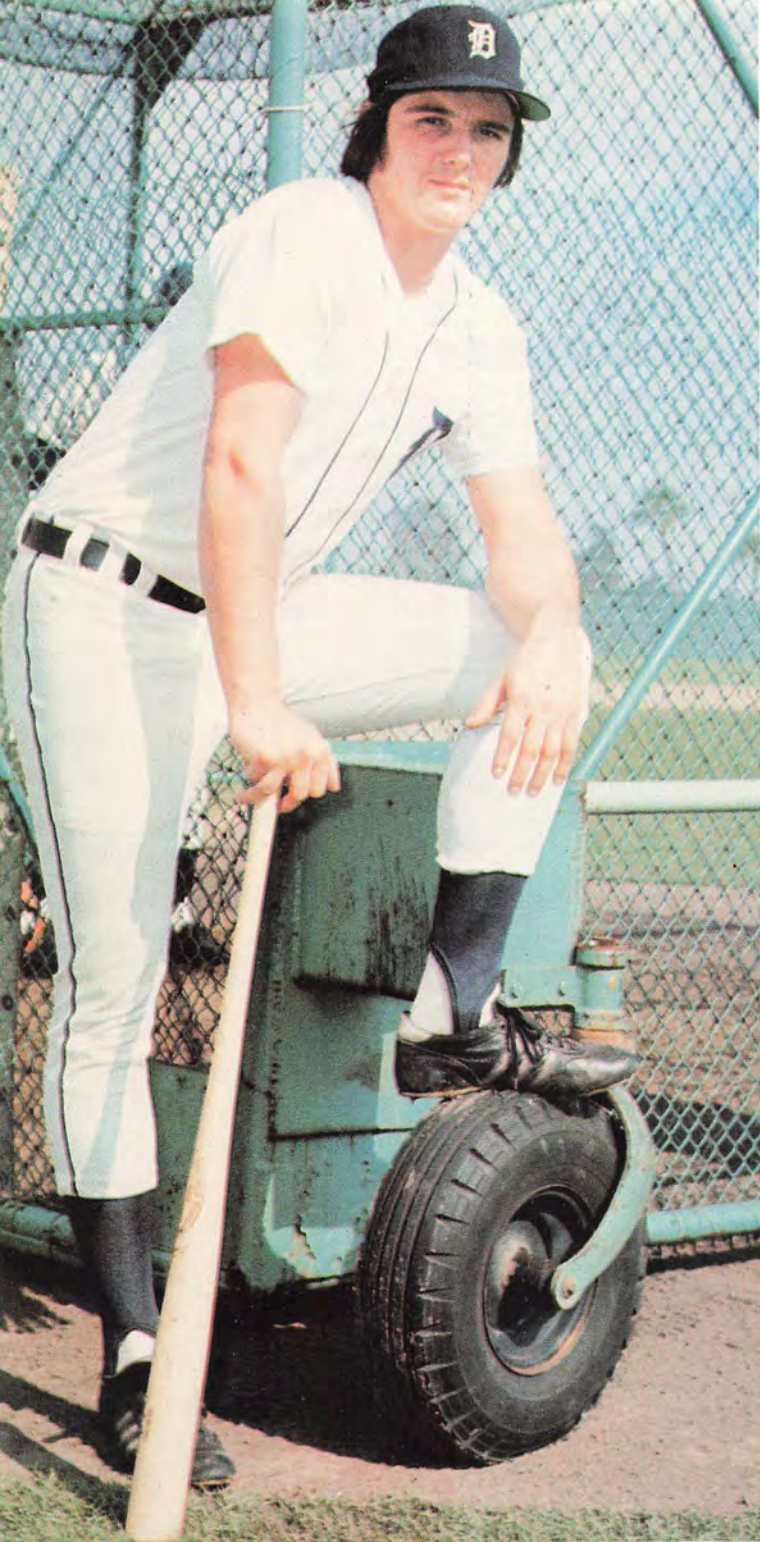

One of the pleasantest notes for the Tigers during the past season was the manner in which Gary Sutherland did the job for them. Acquired from the Houston Astros after five seasons in the National League which also included service at Philadelphia and Montreal, Sutherland was given no better than an even chance to share time at second base when the Tigers got him. But he claimed the job in spring training, became the regular during the season and led the team in two important categories with 157 hits and 619 times at bat. Additionally, his fielding lived up to all of its previous billing as he participated in 101 double plays — the most for any Tiger second baseman since 1958. Sutherland also had a 15-game hitting streak which was the longest of the season for the Tigers and enjoyed the thrills of two home runs in one game against the A's and four hits in a game against the Yankees.

VERN RUHLE

A good start and two promotions made a 20-game winner out of Vern Ruhle in 1974, the third season of campaigning for the one-time Olivet College righthander. He started out with five complete-game victories at Montgomery, posted a 13-5 record in 22 games at Evansville and finished with a flourish at Tiger Stadium by winning both of his only two decisions at the close of the season. Master of control with a good curve, Ruhle has been tabbed as a coming star by almost all who have scouted him.

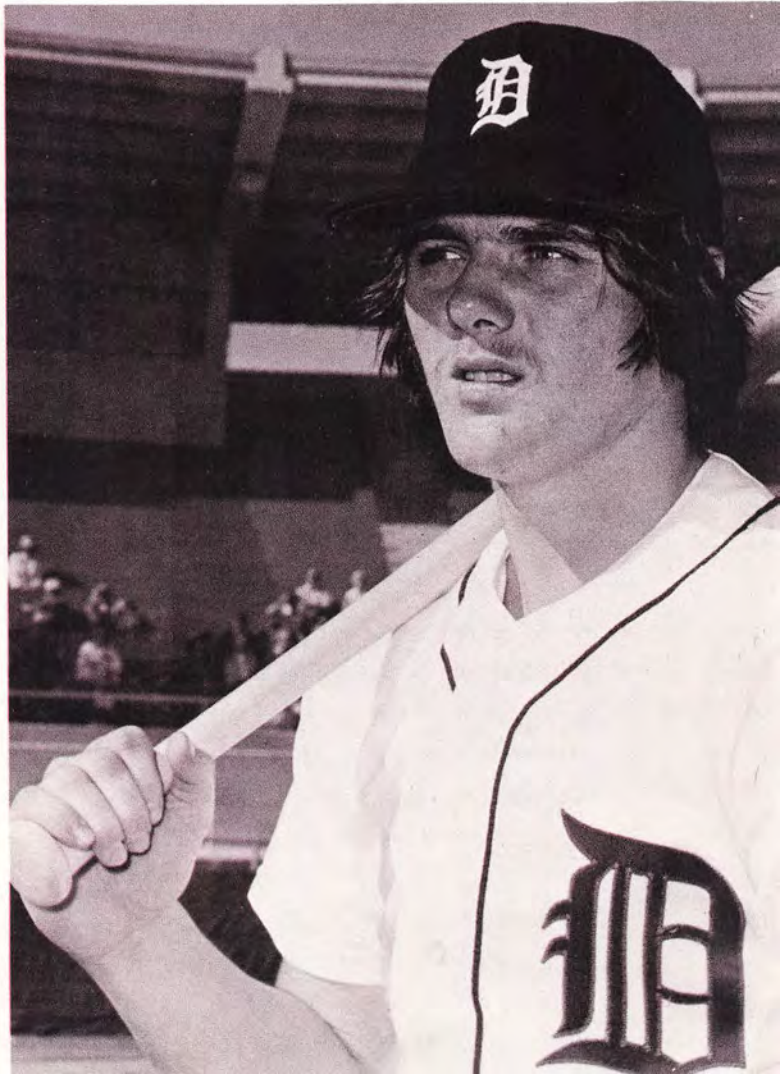

TOM VERYZER

Good credentials support the bid of Tom Veryzer to become the Tigers' regular shortstop — one who can throw hard and hit home runs.

The club's No. 1 draft choice in June, 1971, the Long Island youth started off as the Most Valuable Player in the Appalachian League that season; was a regular on Montgomery's pennant winners the following year; claimed all-star honors at Toledo in 1973 and repeated at Evansville last season, although missing a month of action with a broken wrist.

TERRY HUMPHREY

In Terry Humphrey, the Tigers have obtained a catcher put together in the classic mold of such tall, rangy stars of the past as Bill Dickey and Jim Hegan. Oklahoma-born but now a resident of California, Humphrey came to the Tigers in the off-season with an excellent defensive reputation — only one error in 63 games at Montreal in the last two years.

In his minor league days, Humphrey was a Gulf Coast League all-star in 1969; Southern League all-star in 1970 and Most Valuable Player at Winnipeg in 1971.

HOW THEY GOT HERE

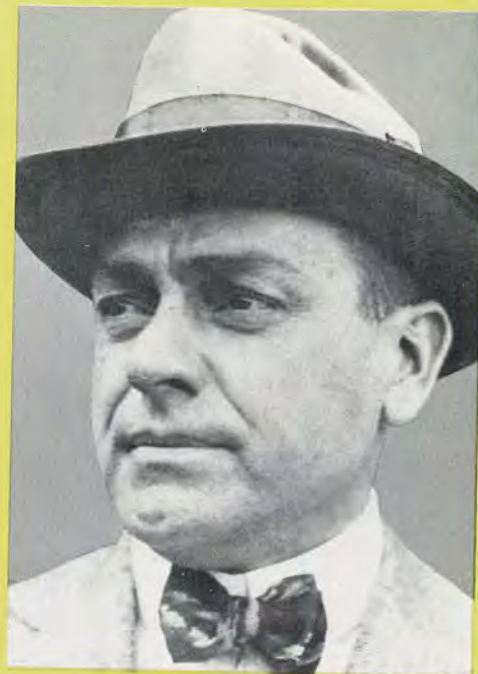

A CAPSULE HISTORY OF THE TIGERS IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

These are the men who started the great tradition which is American League baseball in Detroit — players who from the beginning lived up to their early name of Tigers by scoring 10 runs in the ninth inning to defeat Milwaukee, 14-13, in their American League debut on April 25, 1901. Proudly posing in true tintype fashion above, back row: Fritz Buelow, Ed Siever, Jack Cronin, Roscoe

Miller, George Mullin, Joe Yeager and Jimmy Barrett. Seated: Doc Casey, Ducky Holmes, Manager George Stallings, Pop Dillon, Sport McAllister and Kid Elberfeld. Lounging in front: Doc Nance and Kid Gleason. Below is the scene of their first-game triumph with 10,000 fans packed into the wooden stands of Bennett Park. Note the players gathered at plate for opening ceremonies.

They started it: Ban Johnson, creator of American League; James D. Burns, owner of first Detroit franchise; George Stallings, his manager.

1901 Ban Johnson proclaims American League (name changed from Western League 1900) as major league rival of 25-year-old National League, with Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, DETROIT, Milwaukee, Philadelphia and Washington charter members . . . James D. Burns, hotel man and Wayne County sheriff, owner and George Stallings manager of Detroit entry (called Tigers since 1895 minor league days) . . . Playing site (moved in 1900 from Helen and Champlain, now Lafayette, on eastern city limits) is Michigan-Trumbull location still in use — originally called Haymarket, then Woodbridge Grove, later Bennett Park . . . Sunday games at Burns Park in Springwells Township until 1910 to avoid blue law . . . Tigers in first season finish third . . . Stallings fired at close, Burns selling out soon after.

1902 Franchise purchased by Samuel F. Angus, insurance man, whose bookkeeper is Frank J. Navin, destined to become No. 1 power in American League . . . Team finishes seventh under Frank Dwyer . . . So club soon reported on way to another city.

1903 Edward G. Barrow, later to direct New York Yankee dynasty, named manager . . . Pitchers George Mullin and Wild Bill Donovan and Outfielder Wahoo Sam Crawford help Tigers advance to fifth.

1904 William Hoover Yawkey, Michigan lumber heir, becomes principal owner at 28 years of age . . . Navin and Barrow get minor interests, Barrow later selling out to Yawkey . . . New additions are Shortstop Charley O'Leary, Third Baseman Bill Coughlin and Outfielder Matty McIntyre but Barrow is forced out of managership before end of seventh-place season, Bobby Lowe finishing.

1905 Bill Armour new manager in season marked by debut of Ty Cobb, purchased at age of 18 for $750 from Augusta of Sally League . . . Cobb's first appearance Aug. 30, 1905 marks start of 24-season, 3,-

1907 Hughie Jennings arrives for first of 14 seasons (Tiger record) as celebrated Detroit skipper . . . Tiger fortunes immediately soar with first of three straight American League pennants and first of 12 batting championships for Cobb, hitting .350 . . . Crawford good for 34 doubles, 17 triples with "dead" ball; Donovan is 25-4 with nine 1-0 decisions, Ed Killian 24-12, Mullin 21-20, one of his five 20-win seasons, as Tigers nose out Philadelphia . . . Different story in World Series as Chicago Cubs win four straight following opening game tie.

1908 Yawkey, discouraged by World Series debacle and low attendance of 1907, sells half-interest in club to Navin, who becomes president — a post to be retained until his death 28 years later . . . Another pennant for Jennings and his rampant Tigers, with last-day victory for half-game margin over Cleveland . . . More woe in World Series, however, with Chicago Cubs again winning, in five games.

1909 Third straight pennant, with comfortable margin this time over Philadelphia — but another blank in World Series . . . Pittsburgh Pirates wipe out Tigers in seven games and Hans Wagner overshadows Cobb in personal duel.

1912 Bennett Park is rebuilt, renamed Navin Field, with April 20, 1912 dedication, following third- and second-place finishes of 1910 and 1911 . . . Diamond reversed to move home plate from what is now right-field corner . . . Seating raised to 23,000 with single deck concrete stand replacing 14,000-seat wooden structure . . . Mullin pitches Tigers' first no-hitter vs. St. Louis July 4, 1912 . . . Cobb bats .410 for season but is suspended for taking punch at fan in New York and Tigers strike in protest . . . Jennings fills lineup with sandlotters for game at Philadelphia and result is Tigers' worst drubbing of all time, 24-2 . . . Strike is over next day.

1915 Following two sixths in 1912-13, then fourth in 1914 (when Cobb's salary topped $20,000 for first time as result of Federal League "war"), Tigers win 100 games in 1915 but Jennings suffers "my greatest disappointment" when Boston takes pennant with 101 . . . Milestone: Cobb steals 96 bases for league record still standing 60 years later.

1916 Harry Heilmann regular for first time but Tigers drop to third in 1916, fourth in 1917, seventh in 1918 when season is shortened by World War I . . . Back to fourth as peace returns in 1919 when Cobb wins a record 12th American League batting crown, last of his career.

1920 Walter O. Briggs Sr. and John Kelsey, leading automobile industrialists, are persuaded by Navin to buy Tiger holdings of Yawkey, who had died March 5, 1919 . . . New partners pay $500,000 for half-interest in club for which full price was only $50,000 just 16 years earlier.

1921 Jennings fired after seventh-place finish in 1920; new manager is Cobb, to be in charge six seasons

None could compare with Ty Cobb, who arrived in 1905 and set more records than any player in history.
Above: one of his controversial slides. Below: his peerless baserunning form.

... Now 34, Cobb bats .389 but Tigers run sixth ... In 1922, club moves up to third and Cobb hits .401 but is topped in batting race by George Sisler at .420 ... Tigers second in 1923 — but 16 games short of first.

1924 Charlie Gehringer wears Tiger uniform first time ... Cobb keeps Tigers in race until last week ... That gives Cobb his best managerial mark at 86-68 but it's another third-place finish ... More work on Navin Field: double-decking from first base to third for 30,000 seating capacity.

1927 George Moriarty, one-time Tiger infielder turned umpire, named to replace Cobb as manager following fourth-place in 1925 and sixth-place in 1926, when Heinie Manush is league batting champion at .378 ... Heilmann wins his fourth batting crown in 1927, all on alternate odd-numbered years ... Briggs becomes half-owner of Tigers, buying out Kelsey's stock from his estate.

1929 Bucky Harris is new manager and Moriarty returns to umpiring after finishing fourth in 1927 and sixth in 1928 ... Harris fares no better in five seasons, never better than fifth between 1929 and 1933, despite arrival in 1930 of Hank Greenberg and Tommy Bridges (who spent record 16 years on Tiger mound) — so Harris departs.

1934 Babe Ruth is first choice to succeed Harris but Navin is miffed when Ruth shows more interest in trip to Orient than managerial post in Detroit . . . Mickey Cochrane then sought as playing manager and Briggs comes up with $100,000 necessary to purchase All-Star catcher from Philadelphia . . . Success is instant as Tigers sweep to 1934 pennant with 101-53 record and seven-game margin over New York Yankees . . . Gehringer hits .356, Greenberg .339 and Schoolboy Rowe sets record with 16 straight mound victories . . . However, St. Louis Cardinals grind out seven-game victory in World Series marked by bitterness and final game garbage shower intended for Cards' Joe Medwick . . . Milestone: First spring training at Lakeland, Fla., still going after 40-plus years.

1935 Tigers grab second straight pennant with fairly-easy effort, nine

First World Championship of club's history follows, setting City of Detroit afire as Cochrane's inspired crew downs Chicago Cubs in six-game World Series . . . Winning run in ninth inning of final game scored by Cochrane on single by Goose Goslin.

1936 Briggs becomes sole owner following Navin's death Nov. 13, 1935 from heart seizure while on bridle path . . . Cochrane, named vice-president as well as manager in new alignment, becomes ill and is forced to rest most of first half of 1936 campaign . . . Tigers suffer; finish second but 19½ games out of first.

1938 Navin field is remodeled, re-named Briggs Stadium . . . Seating pushed to more than 53,000 (eventually 54,220) with entire plant double-decked and all under roof except centerfield bleachers . . . Gehring at 34 wins 1937 batting crown at .371; Rudy York posts record 18 home runs in August, 1937 . . . But Cochrane is victim of bean-ing in May that year, steps out as manager in August, 1938 with Tigers in fourth place . . . Greenberg takes aim at Ruth's 1927 record of 60 home runs, ends 1938 season only two short at 58 . . . Del Baker, coach and frequent fill-in manager, takes over from Cochrane for fourth-place windup in 1938; is fifth in 1939.

1940 Tigers back on top again, nosing out Cleveland on next-to-last day to win pennant with 90-64 record . . . However, Cincinnati Reds hang on to take seven-game World Series made dramatic by Bobo Newsom . . . Colorful righthander wins two games, one before and one after his father's death in Cincinnati hotel, tries again in finale with one day's rest — but fails . . . Jack Zeller, general manager since 1939, credited for pennant success by persuading Greenberg to move to outfield, making room at first base for York, and obtaining Dick Bartell from National League . . . However, Zeller also takes blame when 91 Tiger farm players are freed by Commissioner Landis early in 1940 . . . Tigers host All-Star Game first time in 1941; Americans win, 7-5, on Ted Williams homer.

1943 Steve O'Neill is new pilot in 1943 as time runs out on Baker with tie for fourth in 1941 and fifth in 1942 . . . Tigers still fifth in O'Neill's first year but 20 games out instead of 30 . . . Milestone: Dick Wakefield, signed off University of Michigan campus in 1941 for $52,000 and extras as Tigers' first big bonus baby, gains status of regular outfielder in 1943.

1944 Seventh at All-Star break, Tigers build up steam, seem to have pennant within their grasp entering final series of season but split with last-place Washington while St. Louis sweeps four games from New York Yankees for Browns' only pennant in history.

1945 Greenberg, just released by Army rejoins Tigers in mid-season and hits grand slam homer at St. Louis final day of season to nail down Tigers' seventh pennant in their history — freakish because second-place Senators sat around all of final week to make Washington park available to football . . . Hal Newhouser, 101-time winner in four-season 1944-48 heyday with 1.81 ERA in 1945, beats Chicago Cubs twice; Virgil Trucks and Dizzy Trout also winners in seven-game World Series . . . Greenberg delivers two homers, three triples among seven safeties in series . . . George Trautman succeeds Zeller as general manager 1946 only, is followed by Billy Evans 1947-51.

1949 O'Neill teams run second in 1946 and 1947 but drop to fifth under newly-installed lights at Navin Field in 1948 . . . So Red Rolfe is advanced from farm director to end O'Neill's six-year tenure . . . George Kell is crowned American League batting king at .343 in 1949 but Tigers wind up fourth.

1950 Fans' hopes raised as Tigers head pennant parade 119 days but surrender league lead September 15 and bow to New York Yankees by three games at close . . . Fifth-place finish follows in 1951 and dismantling of once-proud Tigers quickly follows, with 16 stars and near-stars departing in two years of frenzied trading largely by Charlie Gehringer, GM Aug. '51 through '53 . . . Tigers again host All-Star Game in 1951; Nationals win, 8-3.

1952 Death comes to Walter O. Briggs Sr., 74, on Jan. 17, 1952, Tigers becoming chattel of his multi-millions estate with his son, Walter O. (Spike) Briggs Jr. guiding force of front office next several seasons with general manager's post held by Muddy Ruel 1953-56, John McHale 1954-58, Rick Ferrell 1959 . . . Rolfe gets gate at mid-season 1952 and Fred Hutchinson completes last-place finish — first in club's history — despite two no-hitters (vs. Washington and New York) by Trucks . . . Sixth in 1953 and fifth in 1954

Birdie Tebbetts blocks plate with determination in Tiger Stadium action from game of 1940s period.

(in face of arrivals like Harvey Kuenn in 1952, Al Kaline in 1953 and Frank Lary in 1954), Hutchinson walks out when denied two-year contract renewal . . . Milestone: Tigertown training base for farm system opened at Lakeland, Fla., 1953.

1955 Bucky Harris returns for two-year term as manager, finishing fifth both seasons then moving on . . . Kaline becomes youngest batting champion in American League history at 20 in 1955 with .340 average . . . Biggest day of his entire career April 17: three home runs (two in one inning), one single, one walk, six RBI (vs. Kansas City).

1956 John E. Fetzer, millionaire broadcasting pioneer, key organizer of 11-man syndicate from radio-television field purchasing Tigers from Briggs estate for $5,500,000 on Oct. 1, 1956 . . . Fetzer named chairman of board, presidency handed to Fred A. Knorr in 1956, Harvey R. Hansen in 1957 and William O. DeWitt (who survived one season of three-year contract) late in 1959.

1957 Jack Tighe promoted from coach to managerial hot spot on Harris' departure; finishes fourth in 1957; off to bad start in 1958 and replaced in June by Bill Norman, minor league manager and scout. . . Norman, in turn, bounced after only 17 games in 1959 with veteran Jimmie Dykes picked up from Pittsburgh coaching staff to become Norman's successor . . . Jim Bunning, 20-game winner in 1957, has no-hitter vs. Boston for highlight of 1958 but Tigers finish fifth; Kuenn is batting champion at .353 in 1959 and Tigers move up one position.

1960 Tigers struggling along in sixth place in August when Dykes is unexpectedly "traded" to Cleveland for Joe Gordon in first swap of managers in major league history . . . Tigers still sixth at close, so Gordon takes walk.

1961 Fetzer, who had gained control of Tigers and assumed presidency in October, 1960, becomes sole owner 13 months later and sets out to establish stability in front office and point for success on field of newly-named Tiger Stadium . . . Bob Scheffing hand-picked by Fetzer for manager in 1961; Tigers respond with control of newly-created 10-team league until early September when New York Yankees pull out to win two-team race . . . Tigers finish with 101 victories, draw 1,600,710 fans for highest total since 1950 and Norm Cash captures American League batting title at .361.

1962 Tigers and Yankees play historic 22-inning, seven-hour game in June, Yankees winning 9-7 . . . Tigers close in fourth place, then make exhibition swing through Japan and Orient, losing only twice in 18 games before 407,500 fans . . . Title of general manager revived after three-year lapse, given to Jim Campbell late in 1962.

1963 With Tigers in eighth place in June, Chuck Dressen replaces Scheffing . . . Veteran peppercorn Dressen enlivens Tiger Stadium scene but Tigers tie for fifth in 1963, run fourth in 1964 and are same in 1965.

1966 Dark days as Dressen, stricken by heart ailment and missing much of 1965 campaign, succumbs Aug. 10, 1966 following other attacks . . . Bob Swift, coach and acting manager both seasons, also stricken and dies Oct. 17, 1966 . . . Frank Skaff, another coach, completes season at helm for third-place finish . . . Milestone: Tigers move into new Marchant Stadium at Lakeland, Fla., for spring training.

1967 Mayo Smith new manager and Tigers find new life in spirited campaign; Detroit, Boston, Minnesota and Chicago all driving for pennant in final stages of race . . . Tigers, faced with herculean load of two doubleheaders in final two days, split four games and Boston wins pennant.

1968 It's another jackpot as Tigers win first pennant and World Championship in 23 years — taking league lead May 10, never relinquishing and finishing 12 games in front . . . Denny McLain (31-6) is first in majors since 1934 to win 30, unanimous choice for both Cy Young and MVP trophies . . . Willie Horton big gun with .285, 36 home runs and 85 RBI . . . In World Series, Tigers third team in history to fall behind three games to one, then burst through — taking it in seven games from St. Louis Cardinals . . . Mickey Lolich, three-game winner, is MVP of series . . . Mickey Stanley moves to shortstop to make room in outfield for previously-injured Kaline . . . Gamble works as Kaline, Cash are hitting stars along with Jim Northrup . . . Jim Campbell acclaimed "executive of year", Mayo Smith "manager of year" . . . Milestone: Tiger home attendance 2,031,847 for first time in two-million circle.

1970 Tigers sag to fourth in 1970 following 1969 second in new 12-team divisional alignment . . . McLain suspended three times, then traded at end of 1970 in celebrated deal with Washington bringing Joe Coleman, Ed Brinkman, Aurelio Rodriguez to Detroit . . . Smith takes departure at end of season.

Mickey Lolich

1971 With Billy Martin new skipper, Tigers push toward top but settle for second as Lolich (25-14) pitches 376 innings for most in league since 1912, Coleman wins 20 times and Cash clears fence 32 times . . . Tiger Stadium rocked by home runs in 1971 All-Star Game; Americans win, 6-4.

1972 Season shortened by players' strike at start but Tigers pick up steam to win Eastern Division title in final series of season against Boston Red Sox, posting 86-70 record behind best defense in American League and stout pitching led by Lolich (22-14) . . . In League Championship Series, pennant goes to Oakland A's in five gripping games (two shutouts, three one-run decisions, two extra-inning struggles).

1973 Martin encounters troubled relations with club and league officials, draws suspension then firing . . . Joe Schultz advances from coaching box to direct last month of third-place finish.

1974 Ralph Houk hired on three-year managerial contract to restore stability, but gamble with veteran lineup turns out losing venture — Tigers last in six-team Eastern Division . . . Kaline brilliant in designated hitter role; concludes 22-year career as Tiger at end of season, after collecting his 3,000th hit Sept. 24, 1974 in Baltimore, his native city, to go with host of other distinctions . . . Rebuilding underway before end of season as 12 youngsters advance from farm system to stake out bids for 1975.

Al Kaline: his 3,007 hits brought membership in an exclusive club.

DAN MEYER

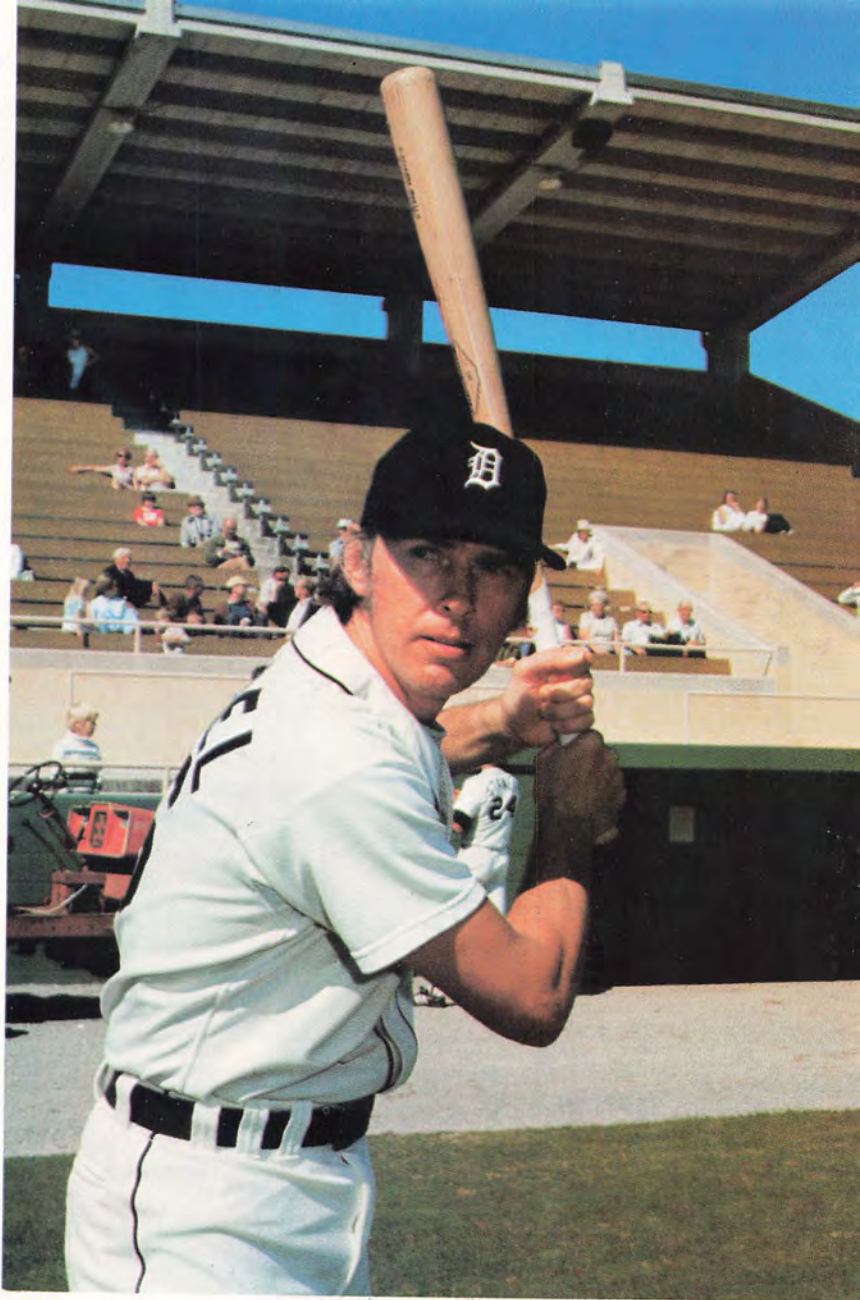

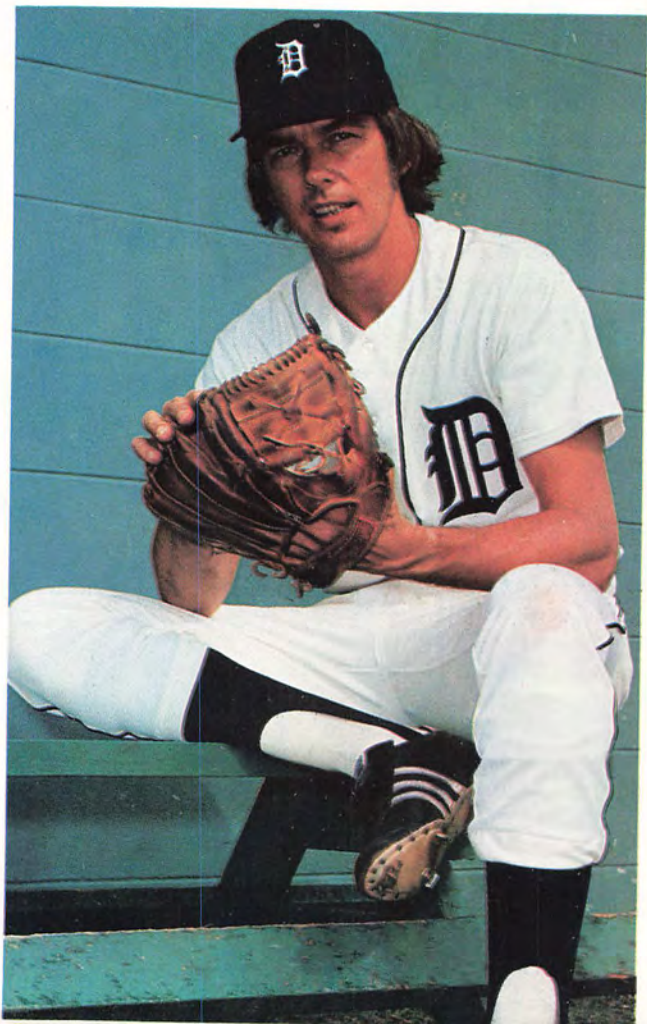

A "Novice of Promise" is the way a national magazine once described Dan Meyer when he was getting his start in the minors. Now the time has arrived for the promise to be fulfilled for the handsome blond belter who has been called "the Tigers' best hitting prospect since Al Kaline."

A high draft selection in 1972, Meyer gave the Tigers high hopes from the start as he hit .396 at Bristol in his rookie season — the highest figure for any batter in baseball, major or minor league. He sagged to .241 in his first full-scale year which followed at Lakeland but two fine winter league campaigns convinced the Tigers he was ready for faster company despite the drop. So he was advanced all the way to Evansville, where he batted .302 to earn a late trial at Tiger Stadium in 1974 and a full shot at a regular job in 1975.

GENE MICHAEL

A late addition with great utility value is the way the Tigers feel about Gene Michael, the veteran switch-hitting infielder who was signed as a free agent just before the start of spring training after seven seasons with the Yankees, five of them as their regular shortstop.

A college cage star at Kent State, Michael rejected pro basketball overtures from the Pistons and Knicks to sign a 1959 baseball contract which led him to the Pirates in 1966 and the Dodgers in 1967 before his long stay with the Yankees, who honored him with a special day at Yankee Stadium in 1973.

TOM WALKER

Although he came to them with only limited experience as a starting pitcher, that was the role the Tigers envisioned for Tom Walker when they acquired the chunky righthander from the Expos in an off-season trade.

Through 100 games at Montreal in 1972 and 1973, Walker was strictly a reliever. Optioned to Memphis in 1974, he found the route to starting success there and was recalled by the Expos to make eight starts in the last two months last season.

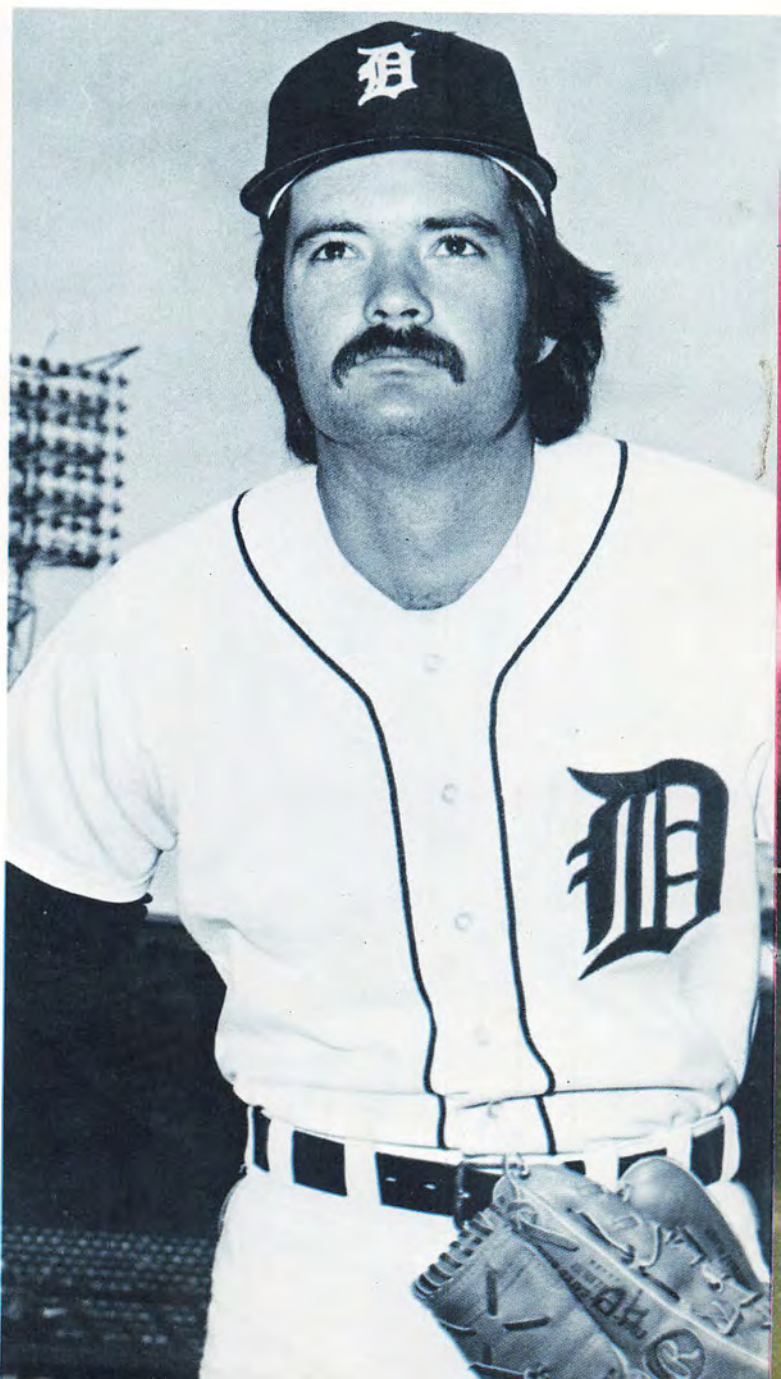

Originally signed by the Orioles, Walker was drafted from the minors by the Expos following the 1971 season during which he pitched a 15-inning no-hitter for Dallas-Fort Worth — the longest no-hitter in professional baseball history.

BEN OGLIVIE

One of the game's most efficient base stealers is Ben Oglivie, who made it 12 times out of 15 attempts last year, his first season as a Tiger. The personable Panamanian also reached career highs in four batting categories in 1974.

RAY BARE

A last-minute spring purchase brought Ray Bare from the Cardinals in time to open 1975 in the Tiger bullpen. A native of Florida, the young righthander was outstanding in the American Association last season, setting the circuit pace with his 2.34 earned run average.

DAVE LEMANCZYK

Success came quickly for Dave Lemanczyk, who was signed in June, 1972 and reached Tiger Stadium less than a year later. However, more seasoning was prescribed before he was called up last May to appear in 22 games, notching his first major league victory in August.

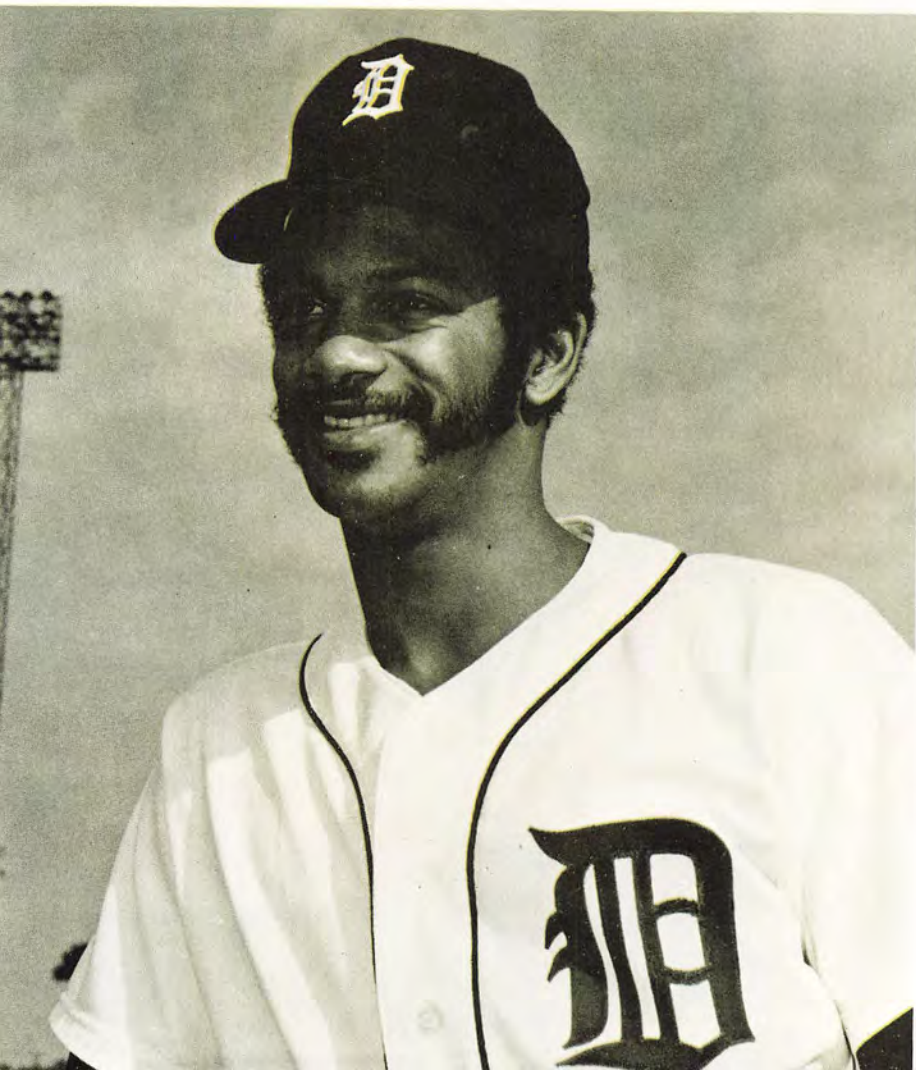

LEON ROBERTS

Three straight impressive seasons in the minors gave Leon Roberts his chance with the Tigers and the young outfielder hopes to make it stick. He was twice Big Ten batting champion while at the University of Michigan, before signing with the Tigers in 1972.

GENE LAMONT

The Tigers had such high respect for Gene Lamont in 1965 that they made him their No. 1 pick in the first player draft ever held. When they traded him in 1973, they promptly got him back via the major league draft and gave the catcher his first full major league season in 1974.

ART JAMES

An all-star every season of his brief minor league career, Art James was top fielder of the Appalachian League in 1972, paced the Midwest in 1973 and batted .295 in the Southern in 1974 to get his chance with the Tigers in 1975. He's a Detroit, from Finney High School.

JOHN KNOX

In his first full major league season in 1974, John Knox gave the Tigers a .307 batting average for 55 games which included 33 at second base and considerable pinch-running for the peppery product of Bowling Green State University.

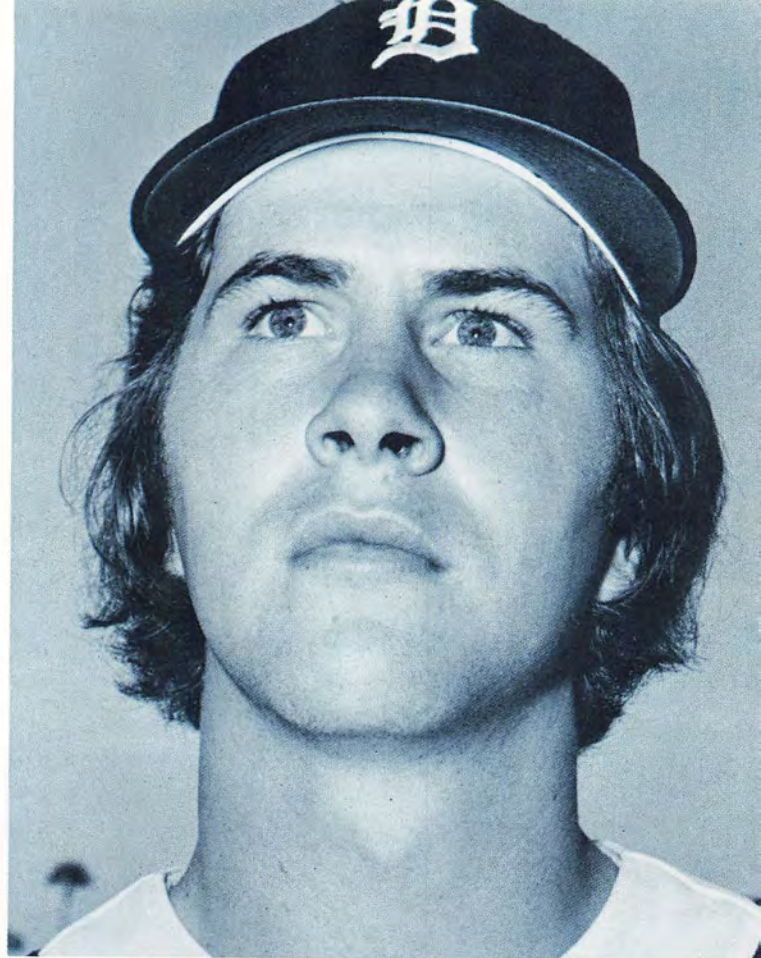

JOHN WOCKENFUSS

Another catcher's injury brought John Wockenfuss to Tiger Stadium late last year after a round-about route. Signed as an outfielder, he was made into a catcher in the minors; belonged to the Senators and Cardinals before acquired by the Tigers in the minors.

As American League Player of the Year in 1974, Al Kaline receives trophy from man for whom it is named: Joseph E. Cronin, Hall of Famer, former American League president.

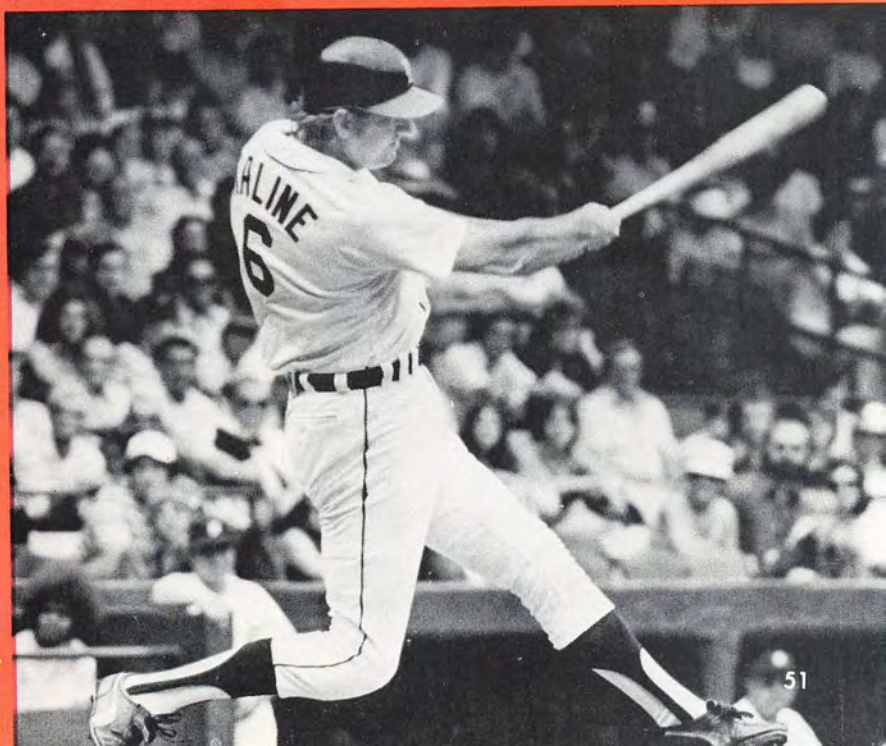

HAIL AND FAREWELL!

One of the greatest careers in Tiger history came to a close Oct. 2, 1974 when Al Kaline called it quits after 22 seasons, 2,834 games, 3,007 hits and 399 home runs — all as a Tiger. First or second in seven Tiger all-time batting categories, his record is a Hall of Fame passport and merits comparison with that of Ty Cobb, the Tigers' immortal Georgia Peach. In attaining his 3,000th hit Sept. 24, 1974, Kaline became the 12th in major league history, the first Tiger since 1921 and the first American Leaguer since 1925 to reach that goal. Batting champion in 1955, Kaline was an All-Star 15 years and won 10 Gold Gloves for fielding skill.

AL KALINE'S FINAL TOTALS & RANKING

They love the Tigers — and it's mutual. The best fans in baseball, younger and older, show their feelings about their favorite team (above), while the young fans at left display some of the rewards for their loyalty — bats, balls, caps and helmets free to the youngsters on the four big Gift Days of the season. They are tokens of the Tigers' appreciation for the thousands of boys and girls visiting Tiger Stadium regularly for good baseball and good fun.
